

THE DOLLS' COBBLER 2011 PRICE LIST

Fanciful Leather Goods In Miniature By The Dolls' Cobbler

Forty years have passed and I'm still making shoes. This list is long and I'm getting older, so I beg your patience in advance if I'm slow. For convenience for both of us on larger orders, I'd prefer you to use a credit or debit card to be put through when the order is complete, or if you plan to pay by check, just send a $10 deposit to start as I don't like to hold checks for long periods. Small orders are no problem – checks or credit cards fine.

I'm trying very hard to keep the postage cost down and will mail your order first class with delivery confirmation; $2 should cover most small orders. Add $1 to that for larger orders or luggage, which requires more packaging.

SPECIAL NOTE: All of the leather is colored to order. Many beautiful effects are obtainable with the finishes available today. If a match is important, please send a fabric swatch or a paint sample card.

NOTE: There are many variations in shoes, especially ladies. I can't begin to list them all, but if you want variety in a particular style, just write "variety" on the description part of the order sheet. I highly recommend The Complete Sourcebook Of Shoes by John Peacock, published by Thames & Hudson. It contains more than 2,000 illustrations, and I refer to it often. If you can get access to this book and pick a certain shoe, we can "be on the same page"!

JUST THE FACTS!

When I started making shoes in the early 1970s, finding my paper-thin, natural sheepskin skiver lining leather was easy. All the leather companies carried it and it cost about 79¢ a square foot. Its purpose in the fashion industry is for lining expensive shoes and handbags, etc., but synthetics are more often used and it is far more profitable for the tanneries to turn those sheepskins into garment leather, which is always in demand.

Tandy Leather, my last source, discontinued carrying it a few years ago but will special order it from Italy. The catch is that the minimum order is several thousand square feet and now it costs nearly $7 a foot. I ordered in 2008 and have about a six-year supply on hand. Add that to the fact that Pearl Harbor was attacked on my 5th birthday and you can understand the big decision I'll have to make someday.
